Preface

Information for the homestead families was taken from church records whenever available. Church records are considered by genealogists as a PRIMARY SOURCE and are likely to be the most reliable information we have about our ancestors. Primary information is defined as information recorded by a witness to the event, or a knowledgeable participant.

There are other sources of information that satisfy the definition of primary including government census and ship manifests. In the case of the homesteaders I have found these somewhat less reliable than church records. The main reason for this is that the homesteaders typically spoke only German and Russian and the person recording the information for the census or manifest often had trouble understanding the language. Also, many of the records have poor penmanship making them difficult to read.

Where primary information is not available we must turn to SECONDARY SOURCES. A secondary source is a record created later by someone who did not experience the time period or event. Secondary sources don't have the degree of reliability of primary sources. In genealogy there are many examples of secondary records including family history, obituaries, headstones, and numerous internet data sites. The information here is often conflicting and I have used triangulation and judgement to pick the most credible version.

If you have information on a homestead family that you believe is more reliable than what I have used, or if you have information that is missing for a family, I would really like to hear from you so that other descendants can turn to this document for the best information available on their homestead ancestors.

The format of this section is determined by the software used to extract reports from my database. It may take a bit of getting used to. One peculiarity of the software is that where a marriage date is not available it reports that one person "met" the other. In nearly all cases we can assume they were married even though I have been unable to find the marriage date. In all cases the name of the person who applied for a homestead is set in bold type.

(Matt applied for a homestead at the same time as his brother, Julius Schoch, about 1911. What happened in the ensuing few years is not clear. Matt and Rosalia do not appear in the 1916 Canada Census, yet Saskatchewan vital stats shows children born on the homestead until 1920. For the next couple of years they were in the Last Mountain region and then moved to British Columbia. It appears he never fulfilled the requirements to gain title to the homestead. Suspected cause is that the land was not suitable for agricultural purposes.)
